

Family Group Portraits

This is one of the few articles in this book specifically directed to the parents of the bride and groom.

Once the wedding plans are completed and you're only days away from the big event, the entire family will begin to gather from near and far to join in the celebrations...one of the happiest "must-be-there" occasions experienced by your immediate family.

As busy as we know you've been, we strongly suggest you set aside one short hour with your family to create a cherished memory...the family portrait you've talked about for years.

Weddings are one of the few celebrations that gather families together from all over the country. There will not be an easier or more convenient time to have a professional photographer take your family group portrait.

Your wedding photographer, in most instances, will be totally occupied with shooting the many aspects of the wedding ceremony and activities. As cherished and beautiful as these photos may be, the formal wedding attire simply does not lend itself to the concept of an heirloom family portrait.

Arrangements can be made with a professional photographer to meet you and your children in a special location, your family home or their studio. Many photographers offer unique studio settings which lend themselves to either a formal portrait or the extremely popular casual group portrait.

You may not have an opportunity to take this treasured photo again...so plan a special family time, a day or so ahead of the wedding to create you unique Family Heirloom portrait.
